Business Problem: Find opportunities to increase revenue.

Project Length: 3 Weeks

Data Collected: Udemy Course Datasheet of Business, Design, Music and Web Development Courses

Questions asked:

How much revenue was generated? What are the top performing courses?

Which courses/subjects generated the most revenue?

Which high performing courses are undercharging?

Software Used:

Google Sheets: Used it for consolidating the different course datasheets, for data cleaning and preminary analysis Tableau: Used for Report Generation and Storytelling

Data Cleaning Log

- Removed 5 duplicate rows
- Deleted 8 blank rows and 2 empty columns (2 of the 8 rows only had data in one cell(rating-0.69, Course-Subject: Web Development))
- Change case of col-name (rating) to lower case, matching the other column names
- Froze header-row
- Changed "Subject: Web Development" to "Web Development"
- Check column stats of course_id column and noticed 4 course_ids that occurred two times.
- Sorted the sheet by course_id, in ascending order, so I could compare duplicate entries
- Noticed only rating col had different values, then I used the average of the two values as the rating. Then I deleted the duplicate value.

I repeated this for the remaining duplicates

I checked col stats again for all cols

Total number of rows = 3672

No empty cells

No duplicate values.

In order to find opportunities to increase the revenue and track course performance one of the perfomance metrics used was the Number of Subscribers.

The number of subcribers helps us identify which subject groups our users (subscribers) are generally interested in and which they either find less interesting or aren't aware of.

It also directly translates to revenue as an increase in the number of subscribers, for paid courses, would lead to an increase in revenue.

Number of Subscribers across each Subject

Average Number of Subscribers

Web Development Courses bring 69% of Subscribers and averagely have 4 times as many subscribers as the other subjects

We see an overwhelming number of Web development subscribers as opposed to Musical Instruments.

Why is this so?

Are the other courses overpriced?

Looking at the Top 20 Subscribed Courses we see a majority of people subscribed to both free and paid Web Development Courses

Looking deeper at our data, we want to find out if on average, which courses are cheaper.

| Introduction | Subscriber Ratio | Top 20 SubscribedCourses | Average Subject Cost | Average Subject Rating | Revenue Ratio |
|------------------|------------------|------------------------------|----------------------|------------------------|---------------|

Average Cost at each Level

When comparing the average price of the courses, Web
Development courses are priced, on average, higher than other subjects while Musical Instruments are the least priced courses

Based on our data, we see price isn't a factor to the disparity in the number of subscribers.

Next we look at the rating of the courses.

Average Cost per Subject

| Top 20SubscribedCourses | Average Subject Cost | Average Subject Rating | Revenue Ratio | List ofUnderpricedCourses |

Unfortunately we lack the data to identify what makes Web Development courses sought-after and how to apply it to other courses. I suggest getting a feedback form from subscribers stating why they chose a particular course and what they hoped to achieve.

So we move on to the next performance metric, which is the Revenue  $\label{eq:General} \mbox{Generated}$

Average Revenue per Subject

Once again Web
Development Courses
bring the most revenue
71.2% of the total revenue generated.
The revenue is calculated as the product of "price of each course" and
"number of subscribers"

| AverageSubject | Revenue Ratio | List of UnderpricedCourses | Potential Revenue | Conclusion |
|--------------------|---------------|--------------------------------|-------------------|------------|
| Rating             |               |                                |                   |            |

While looking for opportunities to increase revenue, I noticed a few courses with a large number of subscribers charging less than the average of what other similar courses charge.

So I complied a list of these courses and added the potential revenue that would have been generated, if the price of the course was equal to the average price.

Using this list, we can identify courses that need to increase their price thus increasing the revenue generated.

Potential Revenue vs Current Revenue

This is a plot of the actual revenue generated vs the potential revenue that could have been generated.

This shows the potential avenue for growth (in revenue) should the price of the courses in the previous list be increased.

Key Issues we noticed from our data
The disparity of the number of subscribers and revenue generated between the subjects.

Our task: To identify opportunities to increase revenue.

*One method is to increase the number of subscribers for the other Subjects (Business Finance, Musical Instruments and Graphic Design)

*The second is to increase the price of courses that are currently undercharging.
